Pew Research Center Final Survey

POPULAR VOTE A TOSSUP: BUSH 49%, GORE 47%, NADER 4%

The Pew Research Center's final pre-election poll of 1,301 likely voters, conducted Nov. 2-5, finds 45% backing George W. Bush, 43% for Al Gore, 4% for Ralph Nader, less than 1% supporting Pat Buchanan, and 8% undecided. The Bush margin is well within sampling error, and narrowed slightly over the course of the field period.

An analysis of undecided voters suggest that those in that category who do vote will divide fairly evenly between the two major party candidates. When undecided voters are allocated, the Center's best estimate of the probable outcome of the popular vote is Bush 49%, Gore 47%, Nader 4% and less than 1% Buchanan. But the contest is so close that we cannot confidently predict the winner of the popular vote.

ABOUT THIS SURVEY AND ITS METHODOLOGY

The survey results are based on 2,254 telephone interviews conducted under the direction of Princeton Survey Research Associates from a nationwide sample of the voting age population, from Thursday evening, Nov. 2, through Sunday evening, Nov. 5, 2000. For results based on the total sample (N=2,254), there is 95% confidence that the error attributed to sampling and other random effects is +/- 2.5 percentage points. For results based on registered voters (N=1,829), the sampling error is +/- 3 percentage points, and for results based on likely voters (N=1,301), the sampling error is +/- 3 points.

In addition to sampling error, one should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.
