

Appendix 1: Religious Diversity Index

The following table shows all 232 countries and territories in descending order of their scores on the Pew Research Center's index of religious diversity. This study calculates Religious Diversity Index (RDI) scores for countries, regions and the world based on the shares of eight major world religions (Buddhists, Christians, folk religions, Hindus, Jews, Muslims, other religions considered as a group, and the religiously unaffiliated). The index is on a scale from 0-10, with 10 being maximum possible diversity if each of the eight groups constitutes an equal share the population. The RDI is divided into four ranges: very high (the top 5% of scores), high (the next highest 15% of scores, which works out to 16% because of tie scores), moderate (the next 20% of scores) and low (the bottom 59% of scores). Data are for 2010.
